Year 2006 → $100,000 USD worth of Yaun invested in a GIC in China at 7% minimum.

Year 2013 → That is now worth close to $200,000 USD. High Interest rates and an appreciating currency. Also, Yes, their currency has GONE UP versus ours!!

There is more money there now you can possibly imagine. Believe me, that country's citizens are just starting their buying spree. All 1,400,000,000 people.

The Olympic Village saga continues. There is a new court decision where 34 buyers are trying to get out of their contracts. The Urban Development Institute (the BC developers association) wanted to participate in the case so that they can shape the way the Real Estate Marketing Act will be applied by the courts, so that they can shape the law in their own interests. The court allowed it.

The cards are stacked now against the buyers (by their names, it looks like mostly HAM or local Chinese). At least there is little chance of these 34 people getting their money out to bid up the prices of other properties.

Just because red carpet wasn't rolled out, don't call it discrimination

http://www.sunnewsnetwork.ca/sunnews/straighttalk/archives/2013/08/20130824-072346.html#.Uhi_KAm-jp4.facebook

Canadians routinely bend over backwards to people who are new to or rough with English. It's simply unfair to cry "discrimination" when just once things don't turn out perfectly.

Hai Xia Sun is doing just that after her experience at a Richmond, B.C., McDonald's.

Sun didn't get what she ordered. She wanted to correct the mistake but says the manager sent her away saying, "You don't understand English ... The line is long. I want to serve other people."

Sun has the Chinese Canadian National Council on her team now — their executive director labelling the experience "unacceptable." Now Sun doesn't just want a simple apology. She wants a written one from the franchise owner, the manager and she wants it made out to all Canadians who aren't native English speakers.

A Chinese woman in Richmond is accusing McDonald's of discrimination because staff could not understand her English and mistakenly gave her a coffee instead of a hot chocolate. The woman is claiming a "second language right" (interesting idea, I don't think a right to retail/restaurant service in Mandarin is in the Charter of Rights). If McDonald's starts requiring employees to speak Mandarin then it will just mean more impoverishment of white people because of Chinese. Already so many jobs in Vancouver area require Mandarin skills. Quote from CBC:

"She said, 'You don't know English,' and then she returned my order. She said, 'We are very busy, don't stay here,'" Hai Xia Sun told CBC News.

Sun called the incident discrimination.

"This is my second language right. And this is discrimination. Yes maybe I speak not very good English but she can't not service to us."

Sun's son David Zhao wants McDonald's to take action by hiring Mandarin speakers at local restaurants.

"In Richmond, how come they don't hire a person who can communicate in Mandarin. All right? That's not a big deal," said Zhao.

The only thing the moved at lightening [sic] speed was the evaporation of his wealth due to his brilliant BMW purchase. He had to pay out 43K to own a car that is worth 30K. When the hospice was announced we were accused of disrespecting their culture.

When someone doesn't get served in Mandarin, they cry racism.

Now this group bitching about the cancellation of the IIP program is pulling the same stunt.

If these instigators keep this up this behaviour it's going to result in even more backlash against the broader community which will be awful for those who aren't trying to manipulate our society for their personal gain.

@ crikey #119 and @ no noise #113 (last thread)

"But I thought that the CIC news was positively received by China people, because it would mean less corrupt money leaving the country?"

I was thinking that too when I read the comment of no noise #113. I clicked the link no noise posted about the 50 cent party. Here are some quotes from wikipedia:

"The 50 Cent Party (五毛党) are Internet commentators (网络评论员) hired by the government of the People's Republic of China (both local and central) or the Communist Party to post comments favorable towards party policies in an attempt to shape and sway public opinion on various Internet message boards... The Internet commentator/50 Cent Party's activities were described by CPC General Secretary, Chinese President Hu Jintao as "a new pattern of public-opinion guidance";[32][33] they represent a shift from erasing dissenting opinions to guiding dialogue since otherwise the "truth may hurt social stability".

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/50_Cent_Party#Effects_and_opinions

So I read that link last night and I thought wow this sounds awfully similar to what I was just reading the US/Canada and other western countries are doing. Western governments are doing the same thing as the 50 Cent Party in China. Western governments are also paying professional trolls to shape online discussions. I posted about that a few weeks ago. The Chinese government should be happy Canada scrapped IIP—that will make it harder for their rich people to get around the Chinese state's capital controls. Many have suggested that the Government of China pressured Canada to end the IIP. So it wouldn't be 50 Cent Party hired trolls voting down these anti-IIP/HAM comments. It may be hired trolls from our own government. It sounds like a crazy conspiracy theory. But we are living in strange times.

I get more disgusted by the minute with these people. Every greedy, self-interested quote in that article makes me want to hiss and spit – like a disgruntled IIP castoff.

Grab a drink, this is going to be a long rant.

*In justifying the cancellation, Minister of Immigration Chris Alexander is reported as saying, "there is also little evidence that immigrant investors as a class are maintaining ties to Canada or making a positive economic contribution to the country.

"Overall, immigrant investors report employment and investment income below Canadian averages and pay significantly lower taxes over a lifetime than other categories of economic immigrants."

Ho argues that the minister has no evidence. "Do we have a very conclusive study or information that can point us to that? I don't think so," he said.*

Hey Ho, this isn't a court of law. A sovereign government doesn't owe you or your scummy clients any evidence about why they choose not to let certain people move in to the country so shut the fuck up.

Moreover, there is the issue of expectations, said Ho.

"There is a doctrine called legitimate expectation. This is not new. For someone who has already filed an application, they would expect someone to deal with the application. You can't just cancel the application without doing anything."*

Shove your doctrine, Ho. You wan't something done with your clients applications?

Fine. We'll first stamp each application with "REJECTED", then cancel the program. Happy now, asshole?

Next time I apply for something and don't get it I'll make sure I tell them about the "doctrine of legitimate expectation". I'm sure that'll help my case.

*Steve Kou, a representative from the business community, gave his speech in Chinese, but later answered questions in English about the economic impact of the lost of the investor program.

"If the cancellation happens, there are no new direct investors in Canada or B.C. So if there is no more money coming to Canada, the growth rate will slow further," said Kou.*

So the future of Canada's economy depends entirely on your scummy clients and their dirty money, is that right Steve?

And buying real estate is is your idea of "investment"? Fuck you, Steve.

*Kou stated that the cancellation would have a huge impact on the B.C. economy, in almost all areas, starting with real estate.

"The first area would be real estate. If you cannot immigrate to Canada, why buy the properties here?"*

Bingo, we finally get to the point. It's all about your income stream isn't, Stevo?

*Sophia Huang, another lawyer on the panel, explained part of the frustration from the Chinese community has to do with not being heard.

"We're frustrated, that's why we're gathering together, because it seems nobody listens to the Chinese new immigrants," said Huang.*

Must be because we're incredibly racist. Isn't that what you really mean? Anytime you don't get what you want it's because we're racist and don't respect your culture.

And who cares what any new immigrant has to say? Put in some time here before you start trying to shape national policy.

"We try to convey the message from the investors to the government, saying 'Listen, everybody is fighting for Chinese immigrants. Especially from China, because new Chinese immigrants not only have money, they also work real hard for their money.'

Yes, they work hard for their money. They work hard for it honey. They work hard for their money and you better treat them right.

Wait, did you actually call them investors? LOL.

*Huang also challenged the government's attitude, stating that Chinese immigrants came to Canada 125 years ago as railroad builders, and paid a head-tax, which was recently apologized for, but now they are saying "please don't come."

"We are saying, 'Listen, you need to communicate with us better. We would like to come here, this is our country, not only your country, it's ours. Our Chinese ancestors built this.'

Can you get any lower than this? Bring up the suffering of past Chinese immigrants who were treated like shit as a reason to let your 1%ers in, because we owe them?

The irony being that your clients made their money exploiting poor Chinese people the same way Canadians treated them 100 years ago, like a baby treats a diaper.

What makes this even worse is that it's their fellow countrymen.

There's a special place in hell for all of you.

Actually I've never heard a BPOM long rant until tonight and it was excellent (as all BPOM posts are). And then in a matter of minutes his and my posts 4,5 from this morning (which were 80% positive all day) had 20+ downvotes added.

I dont know about the site being hacked but certainly targetted attacks are happening so there's a battle going on folks. Admin, anyway to address this? I guess if someone instantly texts 100 friends to downvote so and so on VCI there's no way around that? Or other Belarusian/50 cent black-pings like the last time things were this good circa 2012?

Great to see BPOMs long-rant post #44 recovered nicely overnight from the targetted attack which occurred at 7:15pm last night. I just noticed that Ponzi's post #30 (which BPOM #44 was addressing) was a victim (as was my posts #4 & #5) of that same attack, however they havent recovered. Here's a link to Ponzi's very important Richmond news link from #30 for all to see again:

oh and I guess the way to avoid future targetted attacks is to either only speak nicely about the Chinese 1%, or, change your VCI handle 😊

"Immigration will have to stop. Unfortunately before that happens, an anti-immigrant national political party will rise."

There's nothing wrong with immigration, we just have to get back to admitting better quality people who will work hard, learn the language, integrate into and contribute to our society, and become real Canadians.

No more admitting the tax-evading, corrupt elite with a sense of entitlement and who believe that "Canada belongs to them".

@Johnny-boy #139:

"There is a National anti-immigrant party. It is the Assembly of First Nations. they are still waiting for the rest of us to live up to the Treaties and restrict ourselves to trading outposts!"

That argument rests on another tired lie of multiculturalism: We are all immigrants. Whenever these debates happen someone invariably points out we have no right to complain about immigration because we are all immigrants at the end of the day unless we are First Nations.

Well call me Second Nations. I have proof that I have ancestors in BC going back 140 years and in North America going back at least 400 years. There is international precedent that when a group of people can demonstrate ancestry in a region going back 400 years they can be considered indigenous to that region. I have ancestors who fought in WWII, WWI, American Civil War and American Revolution. I am an indigenous North American and I am white (I do have a little bit of aboriginal ancestry too). I do not belong to any other continent. I am not an immigrant.

One of the lies of Trudeau Liberal multiculturalism is that we are all immigrants. It's not true. Many white people in Canada can trace back their ancestry on this continent going back centuries. Many white people will be shocked to find out when they dig deep they have aboriginal ancestry too. Our heritage on this continent has been taken away from us with this multiculturalism crap. Investigate your genealogy. You can do it for free on the internet and you will likely be surprised at what you uncover.

"Let us into Canada or give us $5m"

Start a blacklist and ban these lowlifes from ever setting foot in our country. Ban their relatives too.

Also ban their shoddy, toxic products from ever reaching our shores while we're at it.

There is no other country on earth where people behave so despicably.

Ok, I'm CBC (chinese born in canada), and seriously you guys have no clue. When my Mother and aunties get together the only thing they talk about is loopholes and how to take advantage of them.

A lot of it is innocent, like extreme couponing, but what you people don't get is that finding loopholes, innocent and not so innocent, is a MAJOR discussion that Asians have, and we pass the tips we find to others. Finding and knowing these is a source of status in the community.

The same way white people get status from droning on about 'unique experiences' or brow beating you about some TED talk or documentary they watched, Asians get that from knowing about deals, loopholes, and ways to get around the system, and sharing that information with others.
